25 Questions you want to be prepared for before you testify in an arbitration, deposition or trial

Your testimony is the critical link proving up the injuries. The whole experience generally doesn't take much more than an hour.

The questions you get are always the same. Through the fine efforts of Gary Lewkovich, he has formulated 25 generic questions that every doctor worth his bones needs to have ready prepared answers.

Preparation is the key. Take this question for example:

Q Dr, you stated you diagnosed a strain injury in this case. What tests did you use?

The answer seems obvious. But under oral testimony you might forget unless you prepare.

Chinese Drywall in your patient's home?

Don't blame Fido if your new home smells like rotten eggs.

News reports all over the country are reporting that some forms of Chinese drywall used in building homes, are radioactive, have strong odors and corrode metal, especially copper.

During the housing boom there was a 17 times increase of importing Chinese drywall.

The culprit seems to be a chemical called phosphogypsum, that is radioactive waste and cheap to obtain in China. That chemical is banned in the US, but not for imports. It's a great two-fer. Rid your country of dangerous waste by products and sell it to the Americas.

Unfortunately, many home owners are forced to incur huge expenses in replacing their drywall, plus attending to numerous physical complaints.

Already many lawsuits have been filed against the builders and importers.

If your patient suffers from chronic headaches, nose bleeds and their "new" home smells like rotten eggs---ask them if their home was built in the last 5 years. Who knows they might have a case.

We go anywhere in California to investigate any serious trauma case. 1-800- 626-0003
